Unconditional Terms Signed At SHAEF Headquarters

The War
Today..By DeWitt MacKenzie
AP War Analyst

NOW THAT THE ALLIES have knocked out Nazism in the bloodiest and most devastating conflict ever known, we find ourselves facing the staggering paradoxical problem of what sort of Victory we have in hand—whether we really have won the war.

The measure of our success will be in the extent of Allied cooperation in the rehabilitation task. Six months ago Marshal Stalin said there was no need to doubt that, if the fighting alliance of the demonstrated powers had stood the trial of war that far, the more so would the alliance stand the trials of the concluding stage of the war.

The alliance has stood the trials thus far, but it is about to be put to even greater tests. With the coming of "peace" we shall be plunged into a politico-economic mess filled with dangers which have no precedent.

To win the war we must win
the rehabilitation period. Edwin L.
James, managing editor of the New York Times, remarks in his column that "in the occupation of Germany there will be an acid test of many there will be an acid test of the ability of the Big Three to work together for common purposes." That's an astute essay by an observer who knows his Europe.
At the end of the last war the German armies laid down their arms and marched home to a country short of supplies because of the naval blockade, but didn't have a scratch on it. Its factories were undamaged and its fields ready for the plow.

Now Germany's mechanical engineering industry, a vital part of her life, has either been destroyed in the main or is to be taken away from her. She also is losing rich agricultural lands in East Prussia.

ARMY RELEASE
PLAN STUDIEDHouse Group Seeks Data On Point System of Discharges

BY WILLIAM F. ARBOGAST
WASHINGTON, May 7.—Torn with dissension over leaks from behind its closed doors, the house military committee sought additional details today on the Army's demobilization plans.

However, there were indications Army officers who talked freely last week might be reluctant to do so again.

One member said he doubted "if the Army ever again will feel free to talk to us confidentially after last week when all the details of the demobilization program were in the newspapers within a few hours."

Chairman May (D-Ky.) said he did not know who was responsible for the leak but that he intended to find out.

Among details of the demobiliza-tion plan the Army has not yet given the committee is the value of points under which an estimated 1-300,000 men will be selected of the 2,000,000 total to be demobilized within a year after Germany falls.

Committee members want to know the order in which these factors will be given consideration:
Length of service, length of foreign service, combat record and dependents. They also are seeking more information on future draft calls.

Based On Point System
The War department told the committee last week of its plans to demobilize 2,000,000 men and to retain 6,968,000 after Germany's defeat. It followed this Saturday night with an official announcement it said had been forced by the committee's disclosures.

The announcement said 1,300,000 of those to be mustered out will be released under the point system, the others to be discharged for various reasons such as disability and age.

Combat units to be sent from Europe to the Pacific will, insofar as possible, be transferred by way of the Panama Canal.

THE VICTOR

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower
Supreme Commander in EuropeMost Peacetime Goods Due
Back On Market In 6 Months

BY STERLING F. GREEN

WASHINGTON, May 7.—Most peacetime goods will be back on the market within six months of today's momentous victory in Europe, although quantities of some will be limited.

Within a year, by official War Production Board estimate, factories will be making consumer goods at the 1939 rate or higher.

But shortages of textiles, lumber and some other things will persist.
Immediately, it is promised, the "brown-out," the midday curfew and the horse racing ban will be lifted.

Gasoline rations will be increased within 30 to 90 days, on the word of Interior Secretary Ickes. A jump from four to six miles of driving daily for A-card motorists is foreseen by Ickes, but OPA says the increase may be less. B-card drivers will get some increase also.

Food Picture Cloudy

Other rationing programs will remain in force, with food supplies generally getting leaner before they are fatter.

Tire rationing will continue indefinitely.
Stoves may come off rationing rather soon, passenger cars not until production hits a volume of about 100,000 a month.

Months probably will pass, officials warn, before the effect is felt in appreciable replenishing of retail shelves and showrooms with electrical appliances.
Almost every industry is expected to get the green light from Washington within four to five months.

Shoes and clothing, lumber, pulp and paper, some chemicals and other items will remain scarce probably as long as Japan resists, WPB predicts. In garments and textiles the shortages are likely to be worse before they are better.

Basic industries starved during the two-front war will get positive WPB help through priorities; these include "favored" items like farm machinery, railroads, truck and bus lines, public utilities, and the petroleum industry.

Some consumer goods will be pushed ahead also. WPB has prepared a list of 25 items whose importance and scarcity warrant special treatment.

The "spot" reconversion plan—which lets single plants reconverse as rapidly as their war usefulness ends—will provide from the outset a trickle, then a stream of consumer goods, to tide the economy over the four-or-five-month transition period.

Even before today's surrender announcement, WPB was preparing to abandon its civilian production freeze.

V-E Day Proclamation Awaited;
5½ Years Of Fighting Is Ended

By EDWARD KENNEDY

REIMS, France, May 7.—Germany surrendered unconditionally to the Western Allies and Russia at 2:41 a. m. French time today. (This was at 8:41 p. m. Salem time Sunday.)
The surrender took place at a little red school house which is the headquarters of Gen. Dwight Eisenhower.

The surrender, which brought the war in Europe to a formal end after five years, eight months and six days of bloodshed and destruction, was signed for Germany by Col.
Gen. Gustav Jodl.

Jodl is the new chief of staff of the German army.
It was signed for the Supreme Allied command by Lieutenant General Walter Bedell Smith, chief of staff for General Eisenhower.

It was also signed by General Ivan Susloparoff for Russia and by General Francois Sevez for France.

General Eisenhower was not present at the signing, but immediately afterward Jodl and his fellow delegate, General Admiral Hans Georg Friedeburg, were received by the Supreme commander.

They were asked sternly if they understood the surrender terms imposed upon Germany and if they would be carried out by Germany.

Germany, which began the war with a ruthless attack upon Poland, followed by successive aggressions and brutality in internment camps, surrendered with an appeal to the victors for mercy toward the German people and armed forces.

After signing the full surrender, Jodl said he wanted to speak and was given leave to do so.

"With this signature," he said in soft-spoken German, "the German people and armed forces are for better or worse delivered into the victors' hands."

Unconditional surrender of the beaten remnants of his legions first was announced by the Germans.

"We Have Succumbed," German People Told

Then the new German foreign minister, Ludwig Schwerin von Krosigk, announced to the German people, shortly after 2 p. m. (8 a. m.
Eastern War time), that "after almost 8 years struggle we have succumbed."

Von Krosigk announced Grand Admiral Karl Doenitz had "ordered the unconditional surrender of all fighting German troops."

The world waited tensely. Then at 9:35 a. m. E. W. T., came the Associated Press flash from Reims, France, telling of the signing at Gen. Eisenhower's headquarters of the unconditional surrender at 2:41
a. m. French time (8:41 a. m. E.
W. T.). Germany had given up to the Western Allies and to Russia.

London went wild at the news.
Crowds jammed Piccadilly Circus Smiling throngs poured out of subways and lined the streets.

(Cheers went up in New York, too, and papers showered down from skyscrapers.)

A sour note came from the German-controlled radio at Prague. A broadcast monitored by the Czechoslovak government offices in London said the German commander in Czechoslovakia did not recognize the surrender of Admiral Doenitz and would fight on until his forces
"have secured free passage for German troops out of the country." But the Prague radio earlier announced the capitulation of Breslau, long besieged by Russian forces.

The BBC said telephone conversations were going on between London, Washington and Moscow in order to fix the exact hour of the V-E day announcement by President Truman, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin.

An announcement on the wave-length of the Flensburg radio, which has been carrying German communications and orders for several days, said:

"German men and women! The high command of the armed forces has today, at the order of Grand Admiral Doenitz, declared the unconditional surrender of all fighting German troops."

The announcement was attributed to the new German foreign minister, Count Schwerin von Krosigk.
An order of the day attributed to Doenitz ordered German U-boats to cease fire.

Negotiations for a new contract are deadlocked in New York, where union officials and operators are meeting.

Banner With the Strange Device

A few billions saved don't make an economy program, but it has been so long since anyone in Washington proposed any kind of saving that President Truman's request for a $744,000,000 cut in the new budget is fanning a flicker of hope. Hopeful citizens are wondering quietly if it might be a portent.

This banner with the strange device—this challenge to the credo that spending must be forever bigger and better—was hoisted over war costs included in the new budget. It may not represent a challenge to spending so much as recognition that war spending will taper off drastically as the nature of the war changes. The bulk of the proposed saving, more than seven billion dollars, was to be made in funds for ship construction. Other cuts were recommended for OWI, WPB, Office of Censorship, ODT, PAW, PSA, WMC, and the Office of Scientific Research and Development.

Taxpayers assume that war spending will cease as war ceases, though the assumption is in many respects too hopeful to be safe. War spending will have to be stopped; it does not stop automatically. The fact that Mr. Truman has moved to stop one small part of it may not signify he is interested in economy, but it does suggest he is watching the money—and that's as much comfort as can be asked for under the circumstances.

Quid Pro Quo

Coming with the end of belligerency in Europe, unless human nature has been turned inside out in the last generation, will be a great revival of quid pro quo thinking and talking.

Everybody will react from the extravagance and waste of war in the same way—what do we get for it? What are the tit-for-tat terms of the proposition? If this is going to cost so much, how much is going to be forthcoming in return?

While the United States will be restrained from being unpleasantly frank about money, under the illusion that only the United States can afford to pick up the check at the end of a war, there is nothing in the international code of manners to stop this country from talking quid pro quo in another connection.

If it must be assumed that America's allies owe it nothing on the score of the material aid it has given them, certainly it doesn't need to be assumed that they do not owe us the benefit of the doubt on claims that aren't going to cost them anything. For instance, they owe us at least a modicum of courtesy in matters where courtesy has no price tag on it. And certainly they owe us whatever reasonable demands will be forthcoming for security along our ocean frontiers. To be specific about this, they need to concede that if the United States refrains from taking islands in their own security zones, which it could take if it were so minded, they should find no objection if the United States utilizes certain islands in its security zones for a legitimate purpose; i. e., security.

36 Months, No More, No Less

A belief that education somehow would be jarred out of some of its irrational routines by the impact of World War II is rebuffed by a survey showing that most colleges and universities seem determined to go back to their nine-month, four-year operations as soon as possible. Only 16 of 101 institutions questioned by Northwestern National Life Insurance Co. are interested in going ahead with the accelerated schedules used during wartime. At least 62 are opposed to acceleration, and the remainder, except for the 16, are skeptical of it.

These findings are disheartening. There is, of course, no rational reason why the college term traditionally runs about nine months a year and for four years. It is an accident of custom that apparently began with English students who traveled to the Continent for higher education. For modern purposes, it may need to be more, or less; the war must have shown educators something about that. Obviously, progressive educators interested in doing more than ever before for young men and women who want to learn, have not needed a world catastrophe to discover that what they have been doing for the last half century is exactly right and cannot be improved.

Mystery Story Method

In perfect line with the mystery story method that enables the super-sleuth to solve the riddle by imagining what he would do if he were the killer, the logical place to be looking for Hitler is not in the rubbish of Berlin. That is not where the mystery master minds would expect to find Hitler, Goebbels, or any other important Nazi at this juncture. It is not where the ordinary criminal would be, if given the same choices. Hitler presumably had in his declining days of power. Certainly death was the least likely way out of his dilemma.

He could try to go somewhere by airplane; with the Allies in control of the air, that would be risky. He could try to flee by land; that would be risky. Or he could try to escape by submarine, the one war weapon the Allies never were able to offset. With a well equipped submarine of the newest type, manned with a picked crew, provisioned to stay at sea as long as possible and under orders to play safe, Hitler and a few cronies could remain at large for an indeterminate period—certainly long enough to get a breathing spell before making the move that might bring them back into contact with their followers in Germany. It is only one more theory, but more credible than the theory of suicide, favored by the Russians, or the theory of death, favored by the Germans.

The Stars Say

For Tuesday, May 8

DESPITE signs of an exceptionally expansive and fortunate day, with every evidence of attaining high goals and fulfilled ambitions, there is much to be done in the way of constructive and practical industry and work in order to reach these objectives. There may be promotions, favors, enhanced prestige and popularity, with much in the way of personal gratification or self-adulation.

As well, there are stubborn obstacles, restraining and depressing situations, accompanied by pitfalls, subtle intrigues and duplicity. Think clearly, postpone new enterprises and conserve physical, financial and social resources for final success.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year in which lofty ambitions and aspirations, with ultimate good fortune, enhanced credit, prestige and popularity, may be attained, but only with much endurance, perseverance, sound tactics and constructive work, in the face of obstacles, limitations, duplicity and subtle undermining from bewildering sources.

To keep a clear head in confusion, treachery, difficult and disturbing situations, may attract the friendly support of those in influential places, who may offer promotion, preferment and substantial aid. But refrain from rash or resentful moods, defer new operations until the mind may be able to cope with hidden and baffling circumstances. Eventually there should be much gratification, with personal as well as business success and happiness.

A child born on this day will have much ambition and high purpose in life, with enterprise and ability to put over important projects, although beset by difficulties, treachery and limitations.

Slippery Customer

There have been suggestions that Herr von Papen, who went to his hunting lodge to await capture, might be used to form a post-Hitler government for the Reich. That idea indicates either lamentable ignorance of Von Papen or a shockingly low idea of Allied intelligence.

Whatever his relations with Hitler, Von Papen always has been high in that Junker group that is willing to fight a dozen wars, if necessary, to lay all Europe waste including Germany, to commit any atrocious act, in order that the Hun eventually may rule the world. He is a slimy, slippery customer. It would be hard to find any other German less desirable.

Common cents help—eighteen hundred and seventy-five of them will buy a War Bond!

President Truman has no intention of rushing the lifting of the racing ban. This is no time to give the nags the run-around.

With camping season here, careless folks are again causing forest fires. We can get along much better without that brand of trail blazing!

Excuse Us If We Don't Join the Celebration

GUARDING YOUR HEALTH

A Special Form of Neuritis

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M. D.

MANY people who suffer pain in the muscles in various parts of the body believe that they are suffering from neuritis and it is true that neuritis does cause painful attacks along the affected nerves.

There is one group of nerves which especially is affected by neuritis. That is the group of nerves which supply the shoulder and arm. A particular condition seems to affect these nerves and it has been called acute brachial radiculitis by Dr. John W. Aldren Turner of England.

This condition starts with severe pain across the back of the shoulder. The pain passes down the outer side of the arm and sometimes into the upper part of the chest.

It continues severe for a few days and then some weakness of the shoulder develops. In addition, there often is numbness. As this weakness of paralysis of the muscles appears, the severe pain usually goes away and is replaced by a throbbing, aching sensation.

Wide Range In Age

Dr. Turner has studied a number of patients with brachial radiculitis. The patients varied in age from 16 to 54 and all of them were men. It would appear that the disorder can occur in persons in any part of the world. In no fewer than one-fourth of the patients the disorder appeared following an operation of one type or another. In another one-fourth of the patients the condition followed some infection such as malaria, influenza, pneumonia or glandular fever. In a few instances the disturbance appeared after an injury, such as a fall on the shoulder. In one instance, the condition developed during a period of severe exposure to cold and rain. In some cases both shoulders were affected.

As yet the exact cause for brachial radiculitis has not been determined. It would not appear probable that it is due to an infection, because there is no fever present nor does the patient feel sick. It has been suggested that perhaps a virus might produce the disorder.

A virus is an organism so small that it will pass through the openings in a porcelain filter. However, in view of the fact that as stated before, there is no fever or feeling of sickness, it is not likely that an infection is responsible.

In so far as treatment of brachial radiculitis is concerned, since the cause is not known, there does not appear to be any method of directly attacking the disease. It is suggested, however, that certain pain-relieving drugs may be given during the early stages of the disorder and that the affected muscles be supported so that they are not stretched. Later on, massage and exercise may do much to help the patient recover (the use of the paralyzed muscles).

An attack of pain in the shoulder should be immediately investigated so that proper treatment may be carried out.

Banner With the Strange Device

A few billions saved don't make an economy program, but it has been so long since anyone in Washington proposed any kind of saving that President Truman's request for a $7,445,000,000 cut in the new budget is fanning a flicker of hope. Hopeful citizens are wondering quietly if it might be a portent.

This banner with the strange device—this challenge to the credo that spending must be forever bigger and better—was hoisted over war costs included in the new budget. It may not represent a challenge to spending so much as recognition that war spending will taper off drastically as the nature of the war changes. The bulk of the proposed saving, more than seven billion dollars, was to be made in funds for ship construction. Other cuts were recommended for OWI, WPB, Office of Censorship, ODT, PAW, PSA, WMC, and the Office of Scientific Research and Development.

Taxpayers assume that war spending will cease as war ceases, though the assumption is in many respects too hopeful to be safe. War spending will have to be stopped; it does not stop automatically. The fact that Mr. Truman has moved to stop one small part of it may not signify he is interested in economy, but it does suggest he is watching the money—and that's as much comfort as can be asked for under the circumstances.

Quid Pro Quo

Coming with the end of belligerency in Europe, unless human nature has been turned inside out in the last generation, will be a great revival of quid pro quo thinking and talking.

Everybody will react from the extravagance and waste of war in the same way—what do we get for it? What are the tit-for-tat terms of the proposition? If this is going to cost so much, how much is going to be forthcoming in return?

While the United States will be restrained from being unpleasantly frank about money, under the illusion that only the United States can afford to pick up the check at the end of a war, there is nothing in the international code of manners to stop this country from talking quid pro quo in another connection.

If it must be assumed that America's allies owe it nothing on the score of the material aid it has given them, certainly it doesn't need to be assumed that they do not owe us the benefit of the doubt on claims that aren't going to cost them anything. For instance, they owe us at least a modicum of courtesy in matters where courtesy has no price tag on it. And certainly they owe us whatever reasonable demands will be forthcoming for security along our ocean frontiers. To be specific about this, they need to concede that if the United States refrains from taking islands in their own security zones, which it could take if it were so minded, they should find no objection if the United States utilizes certain islands in its security zones for a legitimate purpose; i. e., security.

36 Months, No More, No Less

A belief that education somehow would be jarred out of some of its irrational routines by the impact of World War II is rebuffed by a survey showing that most colleges and universities seem determined to go back to their nine-month, four-year operations as soon as possible. Only 16 of 101 institutions questioned by Northwestern National Life Insurance Co. are interested in going ahead with the accelerated schedules used during wartime. At least 62 are opposed to acceleration, and the remainder, except for the 16, are skeptical of it.

These findings are disheartening. There is, of course, no rational reason why the college term traditionally runs about nine months a year and for four years. It is an accident of custom that apparently began with English students who traveled to the Continent for higher education. For modern purposes, it may need to be more, or less; the war must have shown educators something about that. Obviously, progressive educators interested in doing more than ever before for young men and women who want to learn, have not needed a world catastrophe to discover that what they have been doing for the last half century is exactly right and cannot be improved.

In perfect line with the mystery story method that enables the super-sleuth to solve the riddle by imagining what he would do if he were the killer, the logical place to be looking for Hitler is not in the rubbish of Berlin. That is not where the mystery master minds would expect to find Hitler, Goebbels, or any other important Nazi at this juncture. It is not where the ordinary criminal would be, if given the same choices Hitler presumably had in his declining days of power. Certainly death was the least likely way out of his dilemma.

He could try to go somewhere by airplane; with the Allies in control of the air, that would be risky. He could try to flee by land; that would be risky. Or he could try to escape by submarine, the one war weapon the Allies never were able to offset. With a well equipped submarine of the newest type, manned with a picked crew, provisioned to stay at sea as long as possible and under orders to play safe, Hitler and a few cronies could remain at large for an indeterminate period—certainly long enough to get a breathing spell before making the move that might bring them back into contact with their followers in Germany. It is only one more theory, but more credible than the theory of suicide, favored by the Russians, or the theory of death, favored by the Germans.

The Stars Say

For Tuesday, May 8.

DESPITE signs of an exceptionally expansive and fortunate day, with every evidence of attaining high goals and fulfilled ambitions, there is much to be done in the way of constructive and practical industry and work in order to reach these objectives. There may be promotions, favors, enhanced prestige and popularity, with much in the way of personal gratification or self-adoration.

As well, there are stubborn obstacles, restraining and depressing situations, accompanied by pitfalls, subtle intrigues and duplicity. Think clearly, postpone new enterprises and conserve physical, financial and social resources for final success.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year in which lofty ambitions and aspirations, with ultimate good fortune, enhanced credit, prestige and popularity, may be attained, but only with much endurance, perseverance, sound tactics and constructive work, in the face of obstacles, limitations, duplicity and subtle undermining from bewildering sources.

To keep a clear head in confusion, treachery, difficult and disturbing situations, may attract the friendly support of those in influential places, who may offer promotion, preferment and substantial aid. But refrain from rash or resentful moods, defer new operations until the mind may be able to cope with hidden and baffling circumstances. Eventually there should be much gratification, with personal as well as business success and happiness.

A child born on this day will have much ambition and high purpose in life, with enterprise and ability to put over important projects, although beset by difficulties, treachery and limitations.

Slippery Customer

There have been suggestions that Herr von Papen, who went to his hunting lodge to await capture, might be used to form a post-Hitler government for the Reich. That idea indicates either lamentable ignorance of Von Papen or a shockingly low idea of Allied intelligence.

Whatever his relations with Hitler, Von Papen always has been high in that Junker group that is willing to fight a dozen wars, if necessary, to lay all Europe waste including Germany, to commit any atrocious act, in order that the Hun eventually may rule the world. He is a slimy, slippery customer. It would be hard to find any other German less desirable.

Common cents help—eighteen hundred and seventy-five of them will buy a War Bond!

President Truman has no intention of rushing the lifting of the racing ban. This is no time to give the nags the run-around.

With camping season here, careless folks are again causing forest fires. We can get along much better without that brand of trail blazing!

GUARDING YOUR HEALTH

A Special Form of Neuritis

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M. D.

MANY people who suffer pain in the muscles in various parts of the body believe that they are suffering from neuritis and it is true that neuritis does cause painful attacks along the affected nerves.

There is one group of nerves which especially is affected by neuritis. That is the group of nerves which supply the shoulder and arm. A particular condition seems to affect these nerves and it has been called acute brachial radiculitis by Dr. John W. Aldren Turner of England.

This condition starts with severe pain across the back of the shoulder. The pain passes down the outer side of the arm and sometimes into the upper part of the chest.

It continues severe for a few days and then some weakness of the shoulder develops. In addition, there often is numbness. As this weakness of paralysis of the muscles appears, the severe pain usually goes away and is replaced by a throbbing, aching sensation.

Wide Range In Age

Dr. Turner has studied a number of patients with brachial radiculitis. The patients varied in age from 16 to 64 and all of them were men. It would appear that the disorder can occur in persons in any part of the world. In no fewer than one-fourth of the patients the disorder appeared following an operation of one type or another. In another one-fourth of the patients the condition followed some infection such as malaria, influenza, pneumonia or glandular fever. In a few instances the disturbance appeared after an injury, such as a fall on the shoulder. In one instance, the condition developed during a period of severe exposure to cold and rain. In some cases both shoulders were affected.

As yet the exact cause for brachial radiculitis has not been determined. It would not appear probable that it is due to an infection, because there is no fever present nor does the patient feel sick. It has been suggested that perhaps a virus might produce the disorder.

A virus is an organism so small that it will pass through the openings in a porcelain filter. However, in view of the fact that as stated before, there is no fever or feeling of sickness, it is not likely that an infection is responsible.

In so far as treatment of brachial radiculitis is concerned, since the cause is not known, there does not appear to be any method of directly attacking the disease. It is suggested, however, that certain pain-relieving drugs may be given during the early stages of the disorder and that the affected muscles be supported so that they are not stretched. Later on, massage and exercise may do much to help the patient recover the use of the paralyzed muscles.

An attack of pain in the shoulder should be immediately investigated so that proper treatment may be carried out.

The Rise And Fall Of Nazi Germany

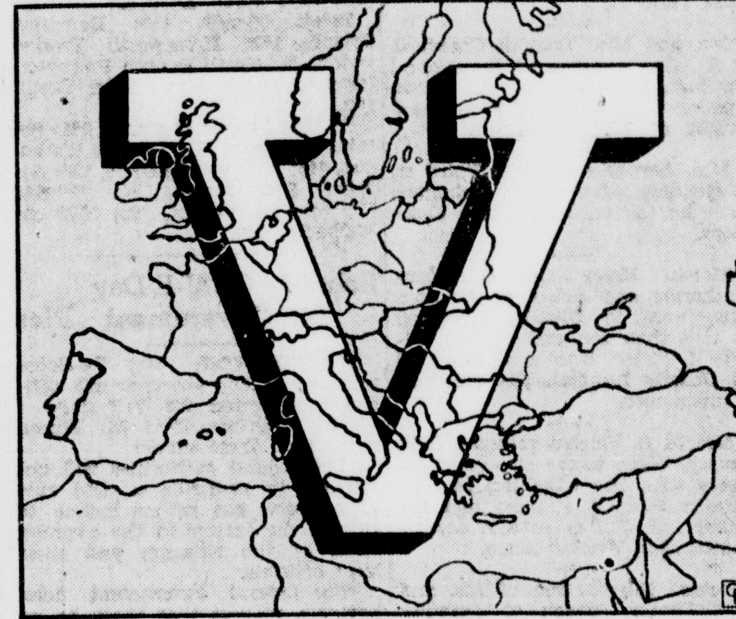

START OF GERMAN AGGRESSION and the move toward conquest began with the bloodless march into Austria in 1938. Then, nation after nation, as indicated on the map, was quickly overrun by the Nazi armies and held fast in the shackles of the German war machine.

AT THE PEAK OF HER POWER, Germany covered thousands of square miles of territory on the continent and in Africa (black area on map above). Her leaders shouted that the day of the "decadent democracies" was over. But their world plans were somewhat premature.

THE TIDE TURNED and the Nazi armies were battered back on all fronts. Mammoth invasions, counterattacks, and huge offensives squeezed the German empire smaller and smaller and finally pushed Hitler's weakened armies right back to the "sacred soil of the Fatherland."

VICTORY! The conqueror is conquered—and the German militarists are no more. On quiet battlefields, hundreds of thousands of men lie buried, victims of the desires of a few who possessed grandiose dreams of power and conquest and ruthlessly tried to make them realities.

Britain's War Triumph Over Nazis Won At Terrible Cost

BY WILLIAM FRYE

LONDON — The cost of triumph over Germany has been a terrible one for Britain, but its payment will be a matter of grim pride for generations in this proud and ancient nation.

This sceptered isle has been a seat of wars for nearly six years and part of what it cost can be told statistically.

In a nation of 47 million people, 22 million men and women were mobilized for direct war service, including 4,500,000, of which 467,000 were women, in the armed forces.

Of the crews who man Britain's merchant ships, 30,000 died up to 1943. By 1943 nearly 3,000 British merchant ships were sunk. The net tonnage of the merchant fleet dropped 17,500,000 to 13,500,000 gross tons, despite construction of 4,500,000 gross tons in British shipyards in that period.

140,000 Civilian Casualties — Civilian casualties totalled nearly 140,000, including more than 57,000 killed and nearly 80,000 injured by the Luftwaffe blitz, buzz bombs, V-2's and channel shelling. More than 23,000 women and more than 7,000 children died.

Enemy attacks destroyed or damaged 4,500,000 houses, almost one of every three houses in the kingdom.

Exports—normally England lives by exports and by carrying the world's trade in British ships—dropped to 29 per cent of the 1938 figure.

Bombings and the fear of bombings dispersed factories, complicated transportation, added miles to workers' daily journeys—but Britain supplied seven-tenths of the munitions requirements of the entire commonwealth and empire, producing—taking some items at random—722 major warships, 13,600 field guns, 3,700,000 machine guns, 25,000 tanks, 900,000 trucks and other vehicles and 102,000 airplanes in the first five years of war.

But the story cannot be told in statistics alone.

Statistics cannot reproduce the blackout, or the sickening desperation of fire and rescue workers who watched London collapsing in rubble, or the horror of Coventry. Statistics cannot explain the simple, undemonstrative, matter-of-fact doggedness and patience of the little men and little women of Britain to whom it never occurred to quit even when logic said they were beaten.

British Plugged On — It takes more statistics to turn disaster such as Dunkerque into melancholy triumph.

Statistics fail miserably to convey the monotony of rationed meals, invariable potatoes, inevitable cabbage, a suspicion of meat, an occasional faint suggestion of butter and cheese year after year.

Statistics cannot suggest wooden-soled shoes and insufficient clothing, threadbare and patched, weary with too much wearing or the acute discomfort of stockinged, chilled legs.

Statistics fail to tell of the vital and irreplaceable strategic accomplishment which was the preservation of Britain as a springboard for the Anglo-American air, sea and ground forces assault on the continent.

And who would try to reduce Churchill to statistics, that bald and chunky figure of Britain's cigar-smoking, brandy-drinking prime minister. When Churchill appears John Bull sees himself exactly as he always imagined himself.

Disaster made Churchill prime minister—the disaster of the collapse in France and the retreat through Dunkerque—and Churchill rode the wave of disaster on a surfboard made of courage, frankness, noble purpose, shrewd strategy and a suggestion of pungent phrases and masterful expositions that kindled the imaginations of the world's free peoples.

Churchill Had a Policy — "I have nothing to offer but blood and toil, tears and sweat." So said Churchill in the house of commons the day he became prime minister—May 11, 1940. The words swept the world and the world suddenly was aware that something very important had happened in London when Chamberlain resigned and Churchill formed a cabinet.

But Churchill had more than blood, toil, tears and sweat to offer. He had a policy and an aim.

"You ask what is our policy? I will say, it is to wage war, by sea, land and air, with all our might and with the strength that God can give us, and to wage war against a monstrous tyranny, never surpassed in the dark, lamentable catalog of human crime. That is our policy."

"You ask what is our aim? I can answer in one word. It is victory—victory at all cost, victory in spite of all terrors, victory, however hard and long the road may be, for without victory there is no survival—let that be realized—no survival for the British empire, no survival for all that the British empire has stood for, no survival for the urge and impulse of the ages, that mankind will move forward toward its goal."

Without victory there is no survival—let that be realized—no survival for the British empire, no survival for all that the British empire has stood for, no survival for the urge and impulse of the ages, that mankind will move forward toward its goal.

THE AMERICAN HOUSE

MRS. GUPTILL was beginning to understand, too. Let's look over the lay of the land," she suggested to my mother.

They crossed the yard without stopping to speak to anyone and stood looking up at the chimney. The two upper floors were half hidden by heavy smoke. Ada rushed up to join them. She had lost them on the way. Her face was sweaty, and her hair hung limply down her back.

"Is as plain as day," Mrs. Guptill said, pointing.

A big flame broke out and lighted Mr. Cutter's window. He was standing there, looking out, his face quite calm. As they watched, horrified, he opened his mouth in a yawn. The flame died down, and he disappeared completely.

Ada gave a long shriek and dashed for the kitchen door. My father caught her on the threshold. "You can't go in there," he told her. "It's a mass of flames."

She pushed and screamed harder. My mother ran across to Benjamin, who was taking down the ladder. "Wait," she cried. "Wait!"

He turned and wiped the soot from his face to the backs of his hand. "It's no use," he said. "We've got the stable to think of."

"But Mr. Cutter, she cried. 'He's in his room.'"

Benjamin stopped short. "What's that?"

"We saw him through the window. Ada's trying to get back in."

Through the din we heard her shouting. "Let me by! Let me by!"

"I'll go up," Benjamin said. "You tell her."

"Only if you're sure..."

He moved the ladder right over where the flames were hottest. Then he grabbed an ax from a man who was passing. The chimney was already tottering.

"Where's he going?" someone shouted.

"What's he after?"

"He hadn't oughter try!"

Four rumps. Five....

"Hey, keep an eye on that chimney!"

Seven.... Eight....

Smoke hid him from the waist up. The two top floors were all aflame. The roof was sagging.

Oh, Benjamin....

A brick fell, almost grazing the ladder. Hands reached out to steady it. "Hey, are you all right?"

"All right." The legs were still now. The ladder shook a little. We heard glass breaking, then we saw a quick, brief rush of flame.

My father rushed up.

"Come back. Do you hear?"

If Benjamin heard he gave no sign of it.

One leg disappeared. Then, slowly, the other. He was inside.

Everyone was very quiet. They knew now where he was going and what he was after. My mother and Mrs. Guptill had brought Ada to the foot of the ladder. She was moaning softly. That was all you could hear except for the crackling of the flames and the whinnying of a horse that had stayed near by. It seemed hours....

A leg came out, groping for a footing. He was safe—so far. Then a limp, heavy roll.

He's got him in a blanket!" More hands reached out to hold the ladder firm.

Another rung, unsteadily, because of the weight he carried. Another. One more....

"The chimney! The chimney's falling!"

Bricks fell, scattering in all directions. One of them hit the rung that Benjamin was grasping. He swayed and caught the side of the ladder.

My father started up. "Keep off! Benjamin shouted. "Twon't hold."

He kept coming slowly, slowly, testing each step.

Flames burst out of the broken window. Heavy clouds of smoke. Just six more rungs. Five.... Four....

"We've got him," my father shouted.

The crowd closed in, cheering. Benjamin pushed his way through it, looking neither left nor right. He was heading for the stable. Jay and my father carried Mr. Cutter to the steps of the Town Hall. Ada, my mother, and Mrs. Guptill followed them.

They had barely left when the roof fell in a shower of sparks, that stung our faces and clung to our clothing until we slapped them out.

"Get back! Get back!"

Big flames shot up. Hot noisy ones. Timbers crumbled. One after another the walls fell in. We could hear the windows crashing and collapsed. People ran back, stumbling over buckets.

"Look out!" "Look out!" A horse whinnied again, wildly. Above it all, if you had been listening, you could have heard the Town Clock striking 9.

In the middle of the night I woke up suddenly. I was in my own bed at home. But there was something, it seemed, hanging over me. Something I had forgotten. Something frightening....

Then it came to me. The comet!

I got out of bed and crept barefooted to the window, half afraid to raise my eyes.

There is was, right above the Academy, streaming across the sky, trailing its long misty, nebulous tail....

I watched it gravely. After the events of the night, it seemed only a rocket, set off on a Fourth of July, that had never burned out. And its tail, the terrible, dreaded tail, seemed only a wisp of fog.

GENERAL EXODUS
RULED GERMAN
WAR STAFF

AP Newsfeatures
Once the Allies started moving forward in World War II, German generals were "neutralized" almost as fast as Japanese admirals. Their departures from the scenes of frustrated Nazi conquests were chronicled variously in such reports as these:
"Killed in action," "captured by the enemy," "replaced by Gen. . . .", "left Germany," "died of wounds," "met a hero's death," "crowned the fight for the Fatherland and the National Socialist Fatherland with his death."
There is no accurate tabulation of the number of German generals who were lost in the Nazi fiasco, but it is safe to say that the best went to the Nazi Valhalla, or were captured.

Among them were these disastrous Prussianism of Nazism: Field Marshal Gen. Friedrich Paulus, commander of the crushed German armies before Stalingrad, captured with 16 generals early in 1943. Paulus later joined the committee of German officers in Moscow and told the Germans the war was lost.

Field Marshal Erwin Rommel (the Desert Fox), "Hitler's favorite general," officially reported in the Reich as having died of wounds received on the Western front. Later reports said he was one of the conspirators in the assassination plot against Hitler in July, 1944.

Field Marshal Guenther von Kluge, former supreme commander of German forces on the Western front, reported to have hanged himself in remorse over his refusal to join the July revolt against Hitler, which brought his comrades to death and torture. Col. Gen. Ludwig Beck, former chief of staff, who reportedly admitted his guilt by suicide following the July revolt.

Field Marshal Erwin von Wittenberg, reportedly hanged as the chief defendant in the bomb plot to kill Hitler. Others "hanged" on the same charges were Maj. Gen. Erich Hoppe, Maj. Gen. Helmut Stieff and Lt. Gen. Paul von Hase. Field Marshal Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, former commander-in-chief of the German army, and Gen. Franz Halder, former chief of the general staff, "liquidated" by the Nazi purge following the revolt. The Führer no doubt added the Alibi cause unwittingly by removing generals simply because they could not agree with his anti-Semitic "strategy." One of these was Field Marshal Gen. Wilhelm Keitel.

An attempt was made to assassinate Keitel in November, 1944. No details were made known. Later he was reported as having inspected the "last stand" defenses of the Nazis in Bavaria. Following the Hitler revolt in July, 1944, Keitel was listed among Junker generals who, at odds with Hitler, had set up a "arrival regime." Also listed among the leaders of the new regime was Field Marshal Fedor von Bock who resigned in 1942 in a row with Hitler over the Stalingrad debacle.

Another, whom Hitler probably regarded as a defector, was Gen. Erwin Rommel. Rommel's second in command in Egypt, captured by Marshal Bernard L. Montgomery (then Lt. Gen.) in Africa. In Thoma, in England in May, 1944, asserted that Germany already had lost the war.

Field Marshal Gen. Walter von Reichenau, who directed the German army's drive through France, was reported to have died of a heart attack. Later, however, the British attributed his death to "sinister influence" behind the back of Hitler.

Field Marshal Walther von Hindenburg, commander of the northern army group on the Western front, was reported wounded by a bomb. It was said his injury necessitated the appointment of Field Marshal Albert Kesselring from Italy to replace Field Marshal Karl Gerd von Rundstedt on the Western front.

The Rise And Fall Of Nazi Germany

START OF GERMAN AGGRESSION and the move toward conquest began with the bloodless march into Austria in 1938. Then, nation after nation, as indicated on the map, was quickly overrun by the Nazi armies and held fast in the shackles of the German war machine.

AT THE PEAK OF HER POWER, Germany covered thousands of square miles of territory on the continent and in Africa (black area on map above). Her leaders shouted that the day of the "decadent democracies" was over. But their world plans were somewhat premature.

THE TIDE TURNED and the Nazi armies were battered back on all fronts. Mammoth invasions, counterattacks, and huge offensives squeezed the German empire smaller and smaller and finally pushed Hitler's weakened armies right back to the "sacred soil of the Fatherland."

Britain's War Triumph Over
Nazis Won At Terrible Cost

BY WILLIAM FRYE
LONDON — The cost of triumph over Germany has been a terrible one for Britain, but its payment will be a matter of grim pride for generations in this proud and ancient nation.

This sequestered isle has been a seat of wars for nearly six years and part of what it cost can be told statistically.
In a nation of 47 million people, 22 million men and women were mobilized for direct war service, including 4,500,000, of which 467,000 were women, in the armed forces.

"Look out!"
"Look out!"
A horse whinnied again, wildly. Above it all, if you had been listening, you could have heard the Town Clock striking 9.

In the middle of the night I woke up suddenly. I was in my own bed at home. But there was something, it seemed, hanging over me. Something I had forgotten. Something frightening....
Then it came to me.
The comet!

I got out of bed and crept barefooted to the window, half afraid to raise my eyes.
There it was, right above the Academy, streaming across the sky, trailing its long misty, nebulous tail....
I watched it gravely.

After the events of the night, it seemed only a rocket, set off on a Fourth of July, that had never burned out. And its tail, the terrible, dreaded tail, seemed only a wisp of fog.

Bowel Cleaning Power Of Erb-Help Medicine

A man recently took ERB-HELP and said afterward that he never would have believed his body contains so much filthy substance. His stomach, intestines, bowels and whole system were thoroughly cleansed. His headaches ended, several skin eruptions on his face dried up overnight. At present he is an altogether different man feeling fine in every way.

Household Hints

Don't uncover or stir vegetables more than necessary. Air in contact with cooking vegetables destroys vitamin C.

If you get a tough cut of steak from your butcher, pound it before cooking. If it's still tough, grind it.

Frozen chicken a la king and creamed tuna fish are recent additions to the wartime list of quick frozen foods — handy for housewives in a hurry. They are pointed free.

Why Fats Are Scarce!

This official U. S. Navy photograph shows a 2000 pound bomb dropping on Jap shore installations in Manila from Curtiss Helldivers of the U. S. Pacific Fleet Task Carrier Forces during the bombardment which preceded the American occupation.

The buildings circled at the upper left of this news photograph have been identified as one of the largest coconut and palm oil refining plants in the Pacific Islands. It will be months or years before such plants are back in operation and we can again import fats and oils from Pacific Islands for war and essential civilian industrial use. Meanwhile every teaspoonful, every drop of used cooking fat you can scoop, skim and scrape is needed to help replace scarce industrial fats and oils. Save every drop! Help your country and help yourself to cash and extra ration points.

Shifting War From Europe to Pacific Won't Be An Easy Job

By JAMES D. WHITE
Associated Press Staff Writer

Victory in Europe turns American eyes to the Pacific. But our two-way war effort cannot be recast overnight into a single surge against Japan. The farther we push Japan back, the longer grow our supply lines, and the shorter Japan's become.

Best estimates are it will take at least six months to reverse our European supply system and transfer the full weight of American armed might to the Pacific. Not only are Pacific distances already the longest in military history, but the reversal itself presents special problems.

Gen. Brehon Somervell, chief of Army Service Forces, disclosed the job probably will require the reconversion of every ship that can be employed," he predicts. "Cargo ships will be uncomfortable, but experience in the last war indicates the boys will be glad to get on anything that floats. Also from the last war, we know that by the time they get to the home port they'll be sore about the boats they came home on.

"As for the half million or so who may remain as occupation troops, we must figure on having to replace them before too long—that's an added problem to think of."

But this is just the beginning of the huge complicated business of "re-deployment"—moving troops from Europe to the Pacific.

Troop transports are faster than the freighters which will carry equipment. Somewhere the troops will have to wait to let their equipment catch up with them. It would be ideal to give them entirely new equipment, but this is too much to hope for throughout says Gen. Gross.

"Re-marrying" Process

After equipment catches up with soldiers, the problem of "re-marrying" them remains. Different types of equipment will be required in some instances. Although the Pacific war has moved out of the jungle to a certain extent, it still is being fought largely in warmer climates than was the case in Europe. Tropical clothing, medicines and other items must be provided and troops instructed in their use.

The Pacific war is expected to require relatively less heavy equipment because of the inferiority of Japanese equipment. Thus, the army may use less artillery ammunition on its way to Tokyo than across Europe. But as fighting moves up from the beachheads of China and Japan it can be expected to increase its appetite.

Although the Pacific is the world's largest ocean, Gen. Gross says it lacks large base areas from which to stage offensives.

"You can't use every little Pacific island as a base for this mass marriage which must take place between troops and equipment," he says. This takes room, for great storage areas and training grounds.

As to training, Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, chief of the Army Ground Forces, said recently that there would be specialized training, but relatively little need for intensive retraining of soldiers from Europe for combat against the Japanese.

He declared that the basic training and discipline was the main thing that methods change through the years but that the principles remain the same.

PACIFIC BASE—The things that men remember of the months and years in a war zone may puzzle their families and civilian friends back home.

Most of the sights, sounds, smells and incidents they recall best may be only incidentally of the war. The shooting and the killing will be blanked out, and they will talk about such things as:

The kid sailor at Saipan who went aquaplaning behind a navy communications speed boat among the ships offshore while a terrible battle was going on ashore only a few hundred yards away.

Vice Adm. Richmond Kelly Turner calmly smoking cigarettes on his open flag bridge while Japanese planes soared overhead and dropped bombs in the night at the ships off Saipan.

Just a Cow

The startled look on the face of Marine Capt. John L. Schwabe of Tulsa, Okla., at an advance observation post during the Saipan battle, when dawn came and he found out that disturbing noise in the night was not infiltrating Japanese—only a brown cow giving birth to win calves.

Marine Maj. Gen. Roy Geiger handing a bottle of beer to a Marine of fiery Pelelu island, and apologizing because the beer was hot and because there wasn't more beer.

These are sights that men remember. The picture-postcard beauty of Tulagi, in the Solomons; the clean, pork-like look of the Russell islands, north of Guadalcanal.

Then there are the torrential rains at Espiritu Santo, in the New Hebrides, so heavy the Quonset hut roofs seem on the point of caving in—servicemen who were there will not forget those rains.

Men remember battle scenes, too—the sound of the guns, the sight of bodies, and splendid but false holiday look of tracer bullets fired at night.

But mostly they don't like to remember the shooting and the killing.

Now Is Time to Insulate Home With Johns-Manville

If you burned five tons of coal this winter, the coal rationing program limits you to only four tons next winter. Perhaps you haven't solved the problem of how to heat satisfactorily with the reduced allotment, but R. B. Finley, local representative for Johns-Manville Rock Wool "Blown" insulation, has the answers.

Employing proper methods, such insulation keeps warm air from escaping in cold weather. In summer, it keeps hot sun from penetrating the home's interior.

Finley has had many homes insulated throughout the county. Their is a neighbor near you who will gladly give you the facts from actual experience. The saving in fuel bills actually runs from 25 to 50 per cent depending on the construction of the house and the extra comfort of a cool house in summer is noticeable in every instance. By phoning Finley he will come to your home and from experience can tell you mightily close on what John's Manville "Blown" Rock Wool will accomplish in fuel savings in your home.

Salona Is Equipped To Aid Victory Gardeners

It's a generally accepted fact that the nation's food problem is a serious matter.

At this season of the year all who possibly can will want to help supply their tables with fresh vegetables, that means getting busy with a spading fork or hiring some one to plow the garden space.

They also are featuring the proven Holmes Vegetable Seeds in the usual varieties that has been so successful with gardeners in this section. The seed is sold in bulk and in any quantity desired.

Commercial Hatcheries report many home owners are buying a few dozen baby chicks with the thought in mind of growing their own meat. If you are one of these the Salona Supply Co. is certainly the place to go for all supplies as this department has always been a specialty with them.

Night Meets Planned At Reilly Field Tuesday And Friday

Louisville Here Tomorrow And County Meet Slated In Evening Affair On Friday

Back from a partial participation in the Canton McKinley relays at Fawcett stadium, Canton, Saturday, Coach Fred E. Cope and his Salem High tracksters are facing one of their most difficult weeks at Reilly stadium this week.

At Canton Cope only employed six Freshmen, five Sophomores and two Seniors and managed to place in three events against a field of 22 of the state's toughest track teams.

Akron North captured the meet again this year with a veteran-stocked lineup that bowled over all comers. Warren placed second, Akron Buchtel third and Boardman fourth, Salem was 12th.

This week the Quaker thineclads play hosts under the lights at Reilly to two important and difficult meets. Tomorrow evening Louisville's crack aggregation will appear under the lights in a dual meet and Friday night the 42nd Columbiana County meet will take place.

Louisville's coach, Wayne Ashbaugh—a former Mount Unioner—says the Bulldogs are the strongest ever produced by that school in the cinder sport. The meet here is a postponed one, originally scheduled back in mid-April, but delayed when rain ruined the plans.

Friday's county meet is all-important to the Quakers. Last year they won the affair at East Palestine by the largest number of points ever compiled by one team over the second place outfit.

To hold that championship—an honor highly coveted here—Coach Cope's charges will have to face East Palestine, East Liverpool and Columbiana.

The field as it now stands appears a walk-away for no team. Cope expects a tight contest with East Palestine. The Potters have shown enough strength of late to make things tough for both of these schools. Columbiana has developed exceptionally well and may surprise a lot of the entries Friday.

The Columbiana county meet is one of the oldest and most bitterly contested events of its kind in the state.

At Canton Saturday Salem points came from a third place in the high hurdles by Senior Bill Standt and a tie for fifth in the high jump by Bob Boone. Dick Baughman also pole vaulted himself into a four-way tie for fourth place in his event.

Other Salem entries, in the four events, failed to place. Cleveland East Tech's highly touted squad did not appear, but a Freshman and Sophomore squad from that school did place entries in nearly every event.

Cope did not have his veteran quartermiler, Mutt Schaeffer, nor the four men ineligible last week, Walt Brian, Francis Lanney, Walt Krauss and Virgil Kelly. A Freshman-Sophomore relay team placed sixth in two events, just one away from a point winning place.

Pitching For Great Lakes Is A Break For Bob Feller

BY HARRY GRAYSON

NEW YORK—Pitching for his Great Lakes club is a tremendous break for Chief Specialist Robert William Andrew Feller, and no young man more richly deserves one.

Bob Feller was assigned to the Naval Training Center following 26 months in charge of a gun crew aboard the battleship Alabama.

Bob Feller... still swift.

bama in the South Pacific. This is Feller's fourth year out of baseball, and taking a regular turn for the sailors will prepare the Iowa Farm Boy for the resumption of his spectacular major league career.

Rapid Robert, only 26, is as swift as ever. All he requires is a little more work. This Great Lakes outfit can use one of the greatest pitchers who ever threw a baseball, for it is younger and less experienced than past blue-jacket brigades.

Feller pitching again is reminding of the many exciting stories he created. There was the spring of 1937 when he threw his arm out. Business Manager Cy Slapnicka took him to doctors in the midwest only to have the arm yanked back in place by A. L. Austin, the Cleveland counterpart of Bonsetter Reese, whose office is only a few blocks from old League Park.

There was that closing day of 1938 in Cleveland's mammoth Municipal Stadium, when Feller established the major league record by striking out 18 Tigers only to lose to southpaw Harry Eisenstat, 4-1.

Feller walked seven and issued as many passes. A single and two doubles gave the Detroiters the first two runs and a single following three straight walks produced the other brace. Chet Laabs whiffed five times.

I'll never forget chatting with Frank Frisch while Feller was making his bow in a big league uniform striking out eight Cardinals in three innings in an exhibition game at old League Park, July 6, 1936.

There were irregularities regarding his contract. The Cleveland club did not seem to know what to do with him, so he had been working in the concession department and pitching for a semi-professional aggregation on Sundays.

As Feller, wild as a March hare, struck out one Red Bird following another between bases on balls, Frisch asked me who he was. The old Fordham Flash nearly went nuts when I told him that Feller was a peanut butter.

Rollie Hemsey cured Feller's whimsy by saying, simply: "See here now, Bob. Let's me and you play catch."

Bob Feller was the only pitcher I ever saw whom major league ball players watched warming up.

CLIPPERS MAY BE TOUGH IN COUNTY MEET HERE FRIDAY

Post Fifth In Difficult 'B' Relays At Poland As Newell Is Star

Coach Johnnie Cabas' Columbiana track team served notice on all county rivals Saturday at the Poland Invitational relays that it will be a strong competitor in the Columbiana county meet under the lights at Reilly field Friday night.

Although in the process of rebuilding track at Clippertown after a four year layoff, Cabas' lads placed fifth in a difficult B school field at Poland Saturday. They tallied 31 points in the meet to be nipped out of a higher spot by Austintown Fitch with 32 points.

Poland won the eighth annual affair with 47 points. Leavittsburg was second with 39 and Springfield township fourth with 33.

Bill Newell, fleet footed halfback and basketball guard, showed his wares to the best advantage of any Clipperman. Newell, a four event man, placed second in the 100 yard dash, second in the 220 and third in the broad jump. He scored 11 of the Clipper points.

Keck Scores
Larry Keck, weight man, placed third in the discus and fourth in the shot put for a five point total.

Don "Chest" Evans, another speedy halfback, topped fourth in the 100 and finished right behind Newell in the 220. He also scored five.

The Clipper shuttle relay team won a third in that event and Dashman McBride came through with a third in the fast 440 yard dash.

Keith Laughlin, improving every time out, wound up in second place in the mile event after the four trips around the cinders. Laughlin has promise of being one of the section's top milers this year if he continues to improve his time as much as he already has this year.

Columbiana plans to bring a full entry into the county meet Friday and will be shooting to equal the enviable mark made here about five years ago by a Clipper team, considered to be one of the best ever produced in Columbiana.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

Orie Hockett and Tony Cuccinello, White Sox—Hockett singled in seven of eight innings, Cuccinello's three-run homer in eighth won the nightcap.

Hal Newhouse and Alton Benton, Tigers—Newhouse hurled one hit shutout in opener against Browns; Benton gained second shutout and fourth win in nightcap.

Dave Ferriss, Red Sox and Hank Borowy, Yankees—Exchanged shutouts, Ferriss winning his second shutout in two starts, and Borowy giving up five hits in nightcap.

Phil Weintraub and Ernie Lombardi, Giants—Their homers in ninth gave Giants 4-3 win over Braves in opener.

Akron North Looms Threat To Cleveland East Tech's Ohio State Cinder Titles

By HAROLD HARRISON

COLUMBUS, May 7.—A new possible threat to Cleveland East Tech's continued Ohio high school track supremacy has appeared on the scene.

East Tech breezed to its second major relays meet victory Saturday, but had to share the spotlight with Akron North, which almost doubled the score of its nearest opponent in winning what was the last of the East Tech's triumph was in the West Side Relays at Cleveland.

where the Scarabs won five of 11 events and piled up 38 points. For the second straight week Cleveland John Marshall ran second to the state champs with 26 points. Lakeview Rhodes, victor over East Tech in a dual meet earlier in the season, was fourth with 19.

Akron North finished with 64 points in the McKinley relays to 35 for Warren and 31 for Akron Buchtel. The individual star of that show was North's Jim Smith, who won the 120-yard high and 220-yard low hurdles and the high jump. He also anchored north's winning shuttle relay team.

Coach Charley Wright at McKinley announced last night that the meet at Canton would be discontinued because of lack of interest.

Walter of Youngstown Boardman set the only new meet record at Canton when he pole vaulted 11 feet 2 1/2 inches. The old mark was 11 feet.

Columbus East, Cincinnati Withrow and Ashtabula were other winners Saturday in Class A competition.

East, third place winner in the Ohio Wesleyan Relays the week before, barely squeezed out a 52 to 46 victory over Columbus Central in the Newark Relays. East's victory in mile relay last event on the program, settled the issue. Columbus North was third with 33 1/2 points and Mansfield fourth with 30.

Three meet records were broken. Columbus East's half-mile relay team lowered the time for that event from 1:33.7 to 1:32.8. Newark's hurdle shuttle relay team trimmed the record from 1:00.1 to 59.6 and Leavittsburg finished second with 39 and Springfield Township was third with 33.

Night Meets Planned At Reilly Field Tuesday And Friday

Louisville Here Tomorrow And County Meet Slated In Evening Affair On Friday

Back from a partial participation in the Canton McKinley relays at Fawcett stadium, Canton, Saturday, Coach Fred E. Cope and his Salem High tracksters are facing one of their most difficult weeks at Reilly stadium this week.

At Canton, Cope only employed six Freshmen, five Sophomores and two Seniors and managed to place in three events against a field of 22 of the state's toughest track teams.

This week the Quaker thinclads play hosts under the lights at Reilly to two important and difficult meets. Tomorrow evening Louisville's crack aggregation will appear under the lights in a dual meet and Friday night the 42nd Columbiana County meet will take place.

Louisville's coach, Wayne Ashbaugh—a former Mount Union—says the Bulldogs are the strongest ever produced by that school in the cinder sport. The meet here is a postponed one, originally scheduled back in mid-April, but delayed when rain ruined the plans.

Friday's county meet is all-important to the Quakers. Last year they won the affair at East Palestine by the largest number of points ever compiled by one team over the second place outfit.

To hold that championship—an honor highly coveted here—Coach Cope's charges will have to face East Palestine, East Liverpool and Columbiana.

The field as it now stands appears a walk-away for no team. Cope expects a tight contest with East Palestine. The Pottery have shown enough strength of late to make things tough for both of these schools. Columbiana has developed exceptionally well and may surprise a lot of the entries Friday.

The Columbiana county meet is one of the oldest and most bitterly contested events of its kind in the state.

At Canton, Saturday, Salem points came from a third place in the high hurdles by Senior Bill Stoudt and a tie for fifth in the high jump by Bob Boone. Dick Baughman also pole vaulted himself into a four-way tie for fourth place in his event.

Other Salem entries, in the four events, failed to place. Cleveland East Tech's highly touted squad did not appear, but a Freshman and Sophomore squad from that school did place entries in nearly every event.

Cope did not have his veteran quartermiler, Mutt Schaeffer, nor the four men ineligible last week, Walt Brian, Francis Lanney, Walt Kraus and Virgil Kelly. A Freshman-Sophomore relay team placed sixth in two events, just one away from a point winning place.

They Hired a Truck

Four men went fishing at Oregon Inlet, N. C., in one automobile, but had to charter a truck to bring home their catch. Shelton Stevens, Thomas Madrin and Chick West, left to right, and Richardson Sedgewich caught 37 channel bass totaling 1512 pounds, a nifty addition to food supply.

Sport Chatter

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
NEW YORK, May 7.—When Frank Faymann, former Notre Dame center, turned up at Cornell recently asking about admission, Coach Ed McKeever advised him to go right back to South Bend and he probably will.

Wes Ferrell, ex-major league pitcher who managed the Greensboro club in the Carolina league recently won a 14-12 game with a two-run homer in the eighth and a four-run round tripper in the fourth.

Bob Kurland, the seven-foot Oklahoma A. and M. basketballer, has been competing in the high jump and shot put for the cowpoke track team this spring. He also comes in handy replacing the pole vault bar.

Seems the importance of that exchange between Ohio State's Carroll Widdoes and his ex-boss, Lieut. Paul Brown, is a Gross exaggeration. The National Father's day committee again is seeking a sports father of the year and, to break the baseball monopoly, suggests a sports writer might qualify. How about Red Patterson, the new National League tub thumper, who has five children? Arthur McFride, the Cleveland cabman is offering at $1,000 War Bond prize for a name for his All-America conference football team. Obviously it should be "taxi-derbies."

Service Dept.
Lieut. James P. Thomas, Jr., former Michigan State swimmer, has just been awarded the Air Medal to go with his Presidential unit citation and his Air Medal with 14 clusters, earned on 90 combat missions. He must have originated that radio gag about the guy who had to chase the squirrel out of his Oak Leaves every morning.

"I believe in facing facts!"

"Sure, I could use a new car as soon as the war is over."

"But let's face facts: I may not get a new car for 2 or 3 years after victory! It's tough, but..."

"After all, my Gulf man's on my side! And he says if I treat my car regularly with Gulfpride and Gulflex, it can last well beyond V-Day!"

"What's more, I believe him, because I know he gives the finest lubrication I can get anywhere! Yes, sir, I'm betting my car will last!"

Attention, Parents!

Give your boy an early business training and teach him the value of money by earning his own. A dollar earned will be more wisely spent than a dollar handed out as an allowance.

A Salem News Carrier Route will do much to accomplish this. There will be several openings in the next few weeks, due to older carriers changing jobs at the close of the school year.

If you should like your boy to have a Salem News Carrier Route, and want complete information how your boy will earn his own money, and we will call at your home and explain completely how he may become a successful newspaper carrier.

Phone 4601

Daladier, Reynard, Gen Weygand Freed

PARIS, May 7.—Two former French premiers, Edouard Daladier and Paul Reynard, were enroute back to Paris today with other notables after liberation from Nazi prison by United States Seventh army forces sweeping through Austria.

Reynard was quoted in a dispatch from Litter as saying he intended to write a book to prove more could have been done to stave off the fall of France.

Among other prominent figures freed were Lt. Gen. Tadeus Z. Komorowski, the famed "General Bor" who led the bloody Polish underground uprising in Warsaw; Gen. Maurice G. Gamelin and Gen. Maxime Weygand, Allied generalissimos in the early war days, and Lt. John G. Winant, Jr., son of the United States ambassador to Britain.

Advices from Rome said Kurt Schuschnigg, former Austrian chancellor; former French Premier Leon Blum and German Pastor Martin Niemoller had been in Allied hands for at least two days.

Dispatches from Rome also said American poet, Ezra Pound, under indictment for treason, had been captured. There were no details of the reported seizure of Pound, long a resident in Europe.

Members of the French group returning to Paris included Francois De La Rocque, head of the extreme right anti-German nationalists, and Michael Clemenceau, son of the World War I statesman and a nephew of Gen. Charles De Gaulle.

DIRECTED SUCCESSFUL AIR WAR

Lt. Gen. Ira Eaker

Maj. Gen. Carl Spaatz

Gen. Henry H. (Hap) Arnold

Gen. James Doolittle

AP News Features

Expansion of land and sea warfare to a third dimension, the air, has been acknowledged in World War II by the high place accorded air generals.

Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur William Tedder, Britain's master strategist, was the deputy supreme commander under Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower and helped plan the final smashing blows against Germany.

A pilot in World War I, he had filled posts in Egypt, Turkey, and Singapore, and was director of air research in London in 1936.

He worked with Lord Beaverbrook in aircraft production until "capture of Air Marshal Boyd sent him to Africa to clear the skies for the final African push and to work with Eisenhower in the Sicilian and Italian campaigns.

Gen. Henry Harley Arnold became commanding general of the U. S. Army Air Forces when the general staff was organized in March, 1942. His work was recognized in December, 1944, when he was promoted to the five star rank of general of the army. A West Pointer, he left the infantry to become one of the army's first fliers.

Gen. C. Carl Spaatz, four star commander of the U. S. Strategic Air Forces in Western Europe during the victory drives, is a taciturn, tough jawed Pennsylvania Dutchman who did not like to be a general because it cut into his flying. He built the 8th Air Force in England, then went to North Africa for the invasion there before returning to London for another invasion.

Lt. Gen. Ira Eaker was commanding general of Mediterranean air operations in their final phases. But he previously directed air operations from England for many months. He became a flier in World War I.

Lt. Gen. James H. Doolittle commanded the 8th Air Force in Europe during the victory drive. Noted for leading the first air raid on Tokyo, he is famous also as the first flier to make an outside loop, the first to land blind and fer many other flying achievements.

Lt. Gen. Lewis H. Brereton, commander of the 1st Airborne army, who developed the first army of the air, came a roundabout way to do it. A graduate of Annapolis, he transferred to the Army Coast Artillery because he got so seasick he "couldn't take it." He went from artillery to airplanes and was air commander in the Philippines when the Japanese struck.

He got into Europe through the back door, going to Java, then India, then Egypt where he organized the great Ploesti oil field raid before moving to London.

WALL STREET
NEW YORK, May 7.—The stock market celebrated the German surrender today by a brisk but selective rally after early profit taking had put most leaders in moderately lower territory.

"Business as usual" was the rule at the opening and, while selling soon dropped off, dealings were relatively quiet. Bids began to arrive before midday and early losses running to a point or so were reduced or converted into gains of as much near the fourth hour. The ticker tape picked up speed on the comeback.

Gayety and Solemnity Mark News of Victory

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK, May 7.—America greeted announcement of Germany's unconditional surrender with a mixture of emotions.

Hilarious gayety, solemn prayer in the streets, a partial stoppage of business and an electric feeling of excitement swept from coast to coast.

New York City's reaction was a snowstorm of waste paper that cascaded from buildings as people shouted and sang in the streets. "They openly wept and prayed on sidewalks.

Police roped off Times Square and all vehicular traffic was stopped in the financial district. Thousands left their jobs to parade with flags and banners.

In Washington, President Sergio Osmena of the Philippines termed the German surrender "a decisive step" along the road to final victory but emphasized that the United Nations must not rest until "Japan is likewise completely crushed."

Moscow Discloses 4 Million Died In Nazi Prison Camp

LONDON, May 7.—The Moscow radio said today that more than 4,000,000 persons of various European nationalities were killed by the Germans in the Oswiecim concentration camp in Poland.

The broadcast quoted the Soviet extraordinary state commission describing the camp as "far surpassing all hitherto known German death-camps in its elaborate equipment, technical organization and mass-scale extermination of people."

"German professors and doctors conducted here mass experiments on perfectly healthy men, women and children" the report said. "They conducted experiments in sterilization of women, castration of men, experiments on children, experiment on artificial infection of masses of people with cancer, typhus and malaria and they tested poisons on live people."

Portal-To-Portal Mine Pay Upheld

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 7.—The Supreme court ruled today that bituminous coal miners are entitled to portal-to-portal underground wages.

Justice Murphy delivered the court's 5-4 decision. Justice Jackson wrote a dissent in which Roberts and Frankfurter concurred.

The court on May 27, 1944, ruled that iron ore miners must be paid portal-to-portal wages—that is pay for the time spent traveling from the mine opening to the actual working place and back again.

Today's decision was given on an appeal by the Jewell Ridge Coal Corp., employer of 900 men in two mines in southwest Virginia. The concern protested a decision by the Fourth Federal Circuit court that such travel time is time worked for which pay is required under the federal wage-hour law.

The bituminous industry has been operating on a portal-to-portal pay basis under a 1943 war-time agreement.

Justice Murphy said the majority agreed with the Fourth Federal Circuit court that there was no substantial factual or legal difference between the case involving the bituminous coal miners and that involving the iron ore miners.

This country with furloughs up to 30 days. Most service units will go directly from Europe to the Pacific theater, with no stop in the United States.

In announcing that draft calls will remain higher than combat losses to permit more veterans to be released, the Army said inductions will cut into ranks of men now deferred.

The announcement also reiterated that all physically fit soldiers in this country who have never been abroad will be assigned to foreign duty as quickly as possible.

On the basis of the Army's plans, an estimated 650,000 men to be demobilized are in Europe, 433,000 are in the Pacific and 217,000 are in this country, most of them with overseas service records. All are combat troops.

The 6,968,000 men to be retained will include not only the force to be turned against Japan but also an estimated 300,000 to 400,000 to be left in Europe for the occupation of Germany and an undetermined force to be kept in this country.

How News of Surrender Was Transmitted To U. S.

The Associated Press detailed account of the formal signing of Germany's unconditional surrender to the Allies came directly from Edward Kennedy, chief of the Associated Press staff on the Western front.

Kennedy's dispatch was transmitted via Paris from Reims. Gen. Eisenhower's advance headquarters, to the London office of the Associated Press, and relayed from there to New York via Associated Press's leased cable facilities.

The War Today

and Silesia. Her mineral wealth will be greatly reduced.

Thus the Reich, which was an integral section of the European economic structure, is dropping out of this place and undoubtedly will come back over a long period of years in an entirely different role. The specialists must figure out a way to balance the economy of a Europe badly shot to pieces, quite apart from the German position.

This situation is complicated by the political changes which are sweeping the continent, and especially by the political vacuum which will exist in Germany until she can find her feet and decide what form of government she wants. This will provide a staggering task of diplomacy for the occupying powers—America, Russia, Britain and France. The Germans will be bitter and sullen under defeat.

All this will put a test even greater than the war on the stability of the alliance among the major Allies. There will be innumerable problems, and probably there will be differences of opinion compared to which the present Polish question is mild.

Still, while the Allies have a straight and narrow path to tread if unity is to be preserved, there is no indication that they can't make the trail together, if they proceed with cool deliberation, especially in the matter of Germany.

ALLIES TO KEEP STRONG AIR ARM TO POLICE EUROPE

(By Associated Press)

LONDON, May 7.—All indications here point to the fact that the U. S. army is preparing to maintain a strong air arm in Europe and transport duties.

While there has been no official announcement concerning the size of the Allied occupational air force, it is estimated unofficially that it will require between 75,000 and 100,000 men in the ground crews alone. The force will be composed of both American and British planes and personnel.

Presumably the American contingent will be drawn from both the Eighth and Ninth air forces and will be retained in Europe for varying periods, depending on the needs of the moment and the previous length of service of individual members.

The eighth air force, commanded by Lt. Gen. James H. Doolittle, is a strategic branch consisting of heavy bombers and fighters.

The Ninth air force, commanded by Lt. Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg, is composed of a variety of aircraft fighters, light and medium bombers, troop transports, cargo carriers and hospital planes.

Doolittle's heavy bombers, based in England, are reported preparing to move to former German air force airbases in Germany.

All the Ninth air force planes already are based on the continent.

The main purpose of the post-war "air police" will be to help maintain order in Germany. Many of the battleworn heavy bombers probably will be pressed into service as cargo carriers and transports.
